Healthcare, social work, education, and special education providers - please join us for in-person training in Rapid City, South Dakota on pediatric mental, emotional, developmental, and behavioral health (MEDB). As a core focus of the Military Child and Family Collaboration Study, the University of Minnesota and Uniformed Services University are partnering with community and military professionals to improve access to MEDB care for children and families in the Upper Midwest. We strongly encourage both military and non-military community based professionals to attend. This event and clock hour CEUs are free but registration is required, as space is limited.

In-person attendees will enjoy:

- Interactive presentations on the diagnosis and care of children with developmental and behavioral health needs, including breakouts for healthcare providers,
- Networking with local professionals from Rapid City area and the Ellsworth Airforce Base and connecting with subject matter experts and specialists from the University of Minnesota Masonic Institute for the Developing Brain and the Uniformed Services University Department of Pediatrics,
- Optional community listening session to support our understanding of barriers, facilitators, and available resources related to pediatric MEDB for rural and military-connected families.
- Unable to join in-person? Virtual attendance is also available during presentation times.

Clock hour certificates of attendance are available for both formats for attendees with verified attendance and successful completion of CEU quizzes. Complimentary breakfast and lunch will be provided to onsite participants.
